Graduation's Activities Fill Busy Schedule

Commencement weekend commenced this year on Saturday, June 6 with the senior class dinner in Alumnae Hall's ballroom. While members of the class of '59 had their last dinner as undergraduates, their proud parents dined in Mary Hemenway.

Afternoon Reception

Dr. A. T. Mollegen officiated at the Baccalaureate service Sunday morning. A Professor of New Testament Christian Ethics at the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Virginia, he spoke on "The Modern Woman in the Modern World."

Sunday afternoon, Miss Clapp held a reception for seniors and their parents and guests.

In the evening, the College Choir performed at the Baccalaureate Vespers. The service featured "He, Watching Over Israel" from Mendelssohn's Elijah, a chorus from Haydn's The Creation, choruses from Pergolesi's Stabat Mater and a Victoria Motet.

Commencement Climax

The climax of the weekend, the commencement exercises was held this morning, starring the senior class and co-starring Secretary Neil McElroy who addressed the graduates and their guests. He spoke on "The Role of Educated Women in the Years Ahead." The Secretary is an honorary member of the Class of 1959 and is the father of Barbara McElroy Dimling '59.

The graduating class numbered 364, and there were 11 M.A. degrees awarded.

Announcement of those students receiving General and Special Honors was made this morning. Elections to Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Xi were also made known.

Mollegen Addresses Baccalaureate Chapel

"Be an intellectual and be a woman," Dr. Albert Mollegen of the Protestant Episcopal Theological Seminary in Virginia urged the class of 1959. In his Baccalaureate sermon in the Houghton Memorial Chapel, Sunday, June 7, he appealed to graduates to recognize commencement as a moment "to change your stance in our time."

Alumnae Weekend Plans To Feature Jewett Buildings

Wellesley alumnae will be introduced to the Jewett Arts Center when they return to the campus for Alumnae Weekend June 11-14. An open house is scheduled for the first evening.

Ruth Campbell Allen '27, President of the Alumnae Association, will make a welcoming speech. Paul R. Barstow, Lecturer in Speech and Director of the Theatre, will speak on "Drama in Jewett."

Jane Busted Fant '34, will talk on "Music in Jewett." There will be an exhibit of the Wellesley College Art Collection in the museum.

Wellesley of Today

Friday morning, several speakers will address assembled alumnae. The topic: "As I see Wellesley Today." Margaret Clapp, President of the College, will preside.

Mary E. Chase, Director of Admission, will head the list of lecturers. She will be followed by Alexander C. Forbes, Chairman of Buildings and Grounds, Elizabeth Cornwall, Executive Dietitian, Virginia V. Sides '44, Assistant to the President, Ella Keats Whiting, Dean of the College, Delene Powers '60, undergraduate representative on the Wellesley Alumnae Magazine, Virginia Onderdonk '29, Professor of Philosophy, and Hilda Crosby Standish '29, Alumnae Trustee.

Step Singing Scheduled

In the evening, an All-Alumnae Program is scheduled. Martha Hale Shackford '96, Professor of English, Emeritus, will pay tribute to Katharine Lee Bates in the 100th Anniversary of the year of her birthday. Lucy Wilson '09, former Dean of Students, will talk about Wellesley Traditions, and Cynthia Dudley Post '34, former Alumnae Trustee, will speak in "The Silver Lining".

Following the speeches, Muriel Crewe Ainley '23 will lead step singing.

Saturday morning offers a Question Period with Miss Clapp, Miss

McElroy Urges Graduates To Foster Educational Aims

Neil H. McElroy

Neil H. McElroy, Secretary of Defense, speaking at Commencement exercises this morning, emphasized that "the role of educated women in the years ahead was never more important to the future of America. . . . You are more important to the future of the nation than missiles," he declared to the 364 graduates of the class of 1959.

He stressed that the graduates of 1959 have responsibilities of leadership — in the home, the community, the country, and the whole world. Having demonstrated their capacity for learning they must now make their "pay-back" contribution to society — a debt which all educated men and women owe for the privilege of having received higher education.

Sed Ministrare

A Wellesley education has equipped the graduates to contribute leadership to cultural, philanthropic, civic and educational progresses of their communities. He pointed out that many graduates would make an important direct, easily measurable contribution to society by becoming teachers.

Teachers should be granted greater financial support and a more favorable community attitude urged Mr. McElroy. It is often overlooked in the so-called missile age, he remarked, that the excellence of our educational patterns, not weapons in storage or the well-trained forces to use them, will determine the strength and survival of our democratic society.

Beyond Superficial

Mr. McElroy pointed out that college training has stimulated the minds of the graduates to seek continuing mental growth and has gained for them an appreciation of the world and people around them. This appreciation will aid them in a greater understanding of the complex world and an ability to probe behind superficial reasoning.

Mr. McElroy added that the education here at Wellesley in the liberal arts tradition has given an ideal preparation to serve at the very heart of a home — for the betterment of family and community. A Wellesley education has made the graduates individuals of diversified interests, he believes.

Think Big

"Don't underestimate yourselves," he urged. "Stimulated and prepared by your education here you will enrich the nation wherever your influence reaches," asserted Mr. McElroy. If you marry and have children, the chances are very great that they will be inspired by you to

Lucienne Schupf Wins Poetry Prize In College Contest

Lucienne Schupf '59, is the winner of the first Joyce Glueck Poetry Contest, sponsored by the New England Poetry Club.

The Joyce Glueck Poetry Contest is named in memory of the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Glueck. Their gift to the Poetry Club has made the new awards possible. Mr. Glueck is a member of the faculty of the Harvard University Law School. Winners of the contest each year will receive, in addition to the prize money, a book of poems by Miss Glueck which have been privately printed.

Booth and Walsh Advise

Thirty-eight students at 18 colleges in New England entered groups of poems in the contest, which was open to undergraduate women students at women's colleges and coeducational institutions.

Lucienne's entry consisted of a

Commitment to Awareness

The last class of the Fifties is leaving Wellesley. Like all classes it probably does not rank many rocket scientists among its members. But it also does not contain many Beatniks, 1959 now faces an evaluation of what Wellesley has done for them and, of equal importance, what they have done for Wellesley. After three years of the lecture system and a senior year under the new academic schedule with its incentive toward independent study the seniors have finished their undergraduate education.

But regardless of whether they are going on to graduate school, they are going on with their education. They have learned to digest and ingest, to synthesize and criticize. But this is only a jumping off point. We hope that four years at Wellesley have also committed them to the life of the inquiring mind. Not only to accept but also to examine, question and go on is Wellesley's mandate to its graduates. That they will accept this mandate in further formal education or in community activity is not the point. More important is that the class of 1959, like all classes before them and to come, have taken up Wellesley's commitment to awareness — an awareness both of themselves and the world around them.

Wellesley Students Present Altered Face After 50 Years

by Roberta Williams '62

Has the Wellesley girl changed in the past fifty years? Where did the girl of the class of 1908 come from and what did she look like? Which courses did she take while here and what extra-curricular activities might she have joined? The dusty archives of the Alumnae Office, Information Bureau and Gymnasium Office yield many facts, not only about our most recent graduate but also about our fifty year alum.

The class of 1908 was quite large when it entered in 1904. 72 percent of the 344 girls were from the East. Those were the days when only the most daring young ladies went to college, freshmen lived in the Vil, nine out of ten college girls wore their hair in the pompadour style, and proper daytime attire was a floorlength skirt and a bouffant-sleeve blouse.

Ever-present 'Angel' Robes

One of the unchanging institutions which greeted freshmen over fifty years ago as it does now, was the physical examination. Compared to the minimum facts kept on the class of 1958, which shows its average member to be 65.21 inches tall and weigh 127.54 lbs. as a freshman, the girls in 1904 had a voluminous amount recorded about them.

The more than forty statistics taken about each girl then, including such things as distance from ankle to knee and circumference of the thigh, were all recorded in centimeters; weights appeared in kilograms. After much addition and division one finds that the Wellesley student fifty years ago was smaller than she is today: the average girl weighed 121.59 lbs. and was 63.86 inches tall.

Changing Interests, Changing Times

Wellesley has always offered her students many and varied extra-curricular activities. A half century ago the newly formed College Government already ruled on the principle that 'each girl will recognize her individual responsibility.' The Legenda and College News Board functioned much as they do today, but as all of the organizations then, they had much smaller staffs. In 1904 ten industrious upperclassmen put out the News.

While Barnswallows, the societies and a few other names are recognized quickly by either the graduate join the society of educated men and women, a great future contribution to America," he said.

Wellesley mothers are charged "to ignite the love and desire for education in their children," affirmed Mr. McElroy. Women can most effectively foster and multiply the society of educated men and women in their own homes where education really stars, he explained.

The intellectual activity of the family depends on the woman of the household, said Mr. McElroy. She is the one who often must provide the stimulus for further study he emphasized.

of 1959 or 1908, many things which interested the turn-of-the-century student no longer found a place in the busy schedule of our most recent alum. Perhaps few people realize that Wellesley once had a popular Mandolin Club, a College Settlement Association, the Student Volunteer Band and for the more hearty souls a varsity basketball and running club.

Academic Stresses Shift

Academically the 1958 graduate had a greater variety of courses offered to her during her college career. The fields of economics and political science have become much more popular; physical education, a very well-populated area at one time, is no longer offered as such; but English continues to attract the modern Wellesley girl as it did her predecessor.

And after graduation there are two striking similarities between the classes of both periods: almost half of each class went into teaching and a large percentage was married. Their difference is that in the early 1900's few young ladies combined the two careers while the class of 1958 seems to exemplify the glories of the working-wife.

Ford Awards Study Grants To Wellesley

The Awards Committee administering the Ford Foundation grants for faculty-student research in political processes at Wellesley has announced an allocation of $780 to Owen S. Stratton, Professor in the department of Political Science. Mr. Stratton plans a research project on the part played by pressure groups in the formation of United States foreign policy.

The grant will be used in getting the project started this summer. The students will receive 350 credit for this special research. Participating students are Barbara Lynch, Peggy Powell, Patricia Wagner and Beatrice Wolfner, all members of the class of 1960.

Study Pressure Groups

The object of the project is to prepare case studies designed to be useful in courses dealing with international politics, United States foreign policy and pressure groups. There has been a real need for case studies of the type proposed. While "everyone knows" that pressure groups operate on foreign as well as domestic policy, there has been a serious lack of close, objective and manageable studies of a sort which would be most useful as a basis for class discussion.

The Awards Committee, consisting of Miss M. Margaret Ball, Professor of Political Science, Chairman, Mrs. Lucy W. Killough, Professor of Economics, Mr. Bartlett H. Stoddley, Associate Professor of Sociology and Miss Ella Keats Whiting, Dean of the College, will accept additional applications for grants in the fall.

New York Wellesley Club Offers Relaxation, Food, Lectures, Men

If you were or are a member of Wellesley who has made or is going to make the pilgrimage to New York, you have at your disposal a ready-made haven. At the corner of Lexington Avenue and 49 St. on the seventeenth floor of the Belmont Plaza Hotel is the Wellesley Club.

Here you have club rooms for entertaining, terraces for sunbathing and three dressing rooms for refreshing and relaxing. Through the club theatre tickets for the top shows may be obtained at short notice, and even at reasonable prices!

A Busy Center

Miss Rachel Niles '26, as the Permanent Executive Secretary, is at the club five days a week. She answers questions, makes reservation, relays information and arranges for the specific use of the club rooms.

Those just arrived or settling in the great metropolis have a mine of information in the Exchange Board, which can provide them with leads on both apartments and jobs.

Entertaining, Entertainment

For entertainment purposes, the members may invite up to ten guests free of charge and can arrange for food to be served, through the Hotel. The Club also offers a small but efficient kitchen where meals may be prepared.

Junior Members, those who have graduated from the college ten years or less, have monthly cocktail parties where they are greatly outnumbered by members of the opposite sex. Other activities include Class suppers and luncheons, parties, dances, lectures and panel discussions.

Come on along...

Anyone who is an alumna, an ex-member of the College or an undergraduate is fully eligible to join. Mothers of alumnae or undergraduates may also enjoy these opportunities by becoming associate members.

Regular membership is $10, Junior membership fees are $6. The Club is now in its seventieth year, and at the present time consists of 700 members, 60 of which are also members of the class of 1958.

of the woman, he believes, and each graduate must decide for herself what being a woman in the modern world must be.

"Compete with men," he declared, "but compete with men as women and not as men." Men and women should complement each other, he felt. "Be a woman, then, in your own individual way and help men find what being men means as we shall try to help you find your womanhood."

Not Olympian Apathy

"Be responsibly political," Dr. Mollegen implored. He acknowledged the political apathy of the modern era and reminded graduates that "to be a fatalist and irresponsible is to be creatures of fate and less than human."

To those who are tempted to dwell on the Olympus of intellectual detachment, Dr. Mollegen warned "come down from the Magic Mountain to the arena in which humans labor and sacrifice for the right and the just and the true."

Commitment to God

"Be religious," was Dr. Mollegen's final request. Know the faith by which you live. "Life has a meaning for you here, now and at this moment... Whatever it is, live it, love it, know it. It supports life, it infuses life with joy, it has expectation."

Being religious also means listening with mind and pulse to the commitments of others, the speaker explained.

It means relating oneself to some segment of the people of God, for "religion is like measles, it can only be caught by contagion. Finally, to be religious one must trust God, he declared.

"Whether you believe in Him or not, He is," Dr. Mollegen concluded. "Whether you love Him or not, He loves you. He loves you whoever you are, whatever you are, whoever you become, whatever you become."

... And I didn't pay my library fine ...

Miss Dennis, Miss Prentiss Announce Retirement Plans

Two members of the Wellesley College faculty, both Wellesley graduates, will retire this month. Miss Dorothy W. Dennis, professor of French, has served on the Wellesley faculty for 42 years and Miss Mary Eleanor Prentiss, associate professor of English, for 26 years. This is the first time in the history of the College that the only retiring members of the faculty have been Wellesley alumnae.

After graduating from Wellesley in 1914, Miss Dennis attended the Sorbonne in Paris, receiving the Diplôme de'études Universitaires in 1916. In 1954 she received the title Officier de l'Instruction Publique from the French Government.

Next Year at Rockford

Much interested in the study of American students in France, since 1928 she has been a member of the advisory council on undergraduate study abroad of the Institute of International Education. She has taught at the University of Grenoble, and at summer sessions of Dartmouth College and Middlebury College and was Director of the School of Techniques held by Wellesley in the summer of 1945. Next year she will be the John Hay Whitney Professor at Rockford College, Rockford, Ill.

Miss Prentiss received the M.A. degree at Columbia University and did further graduate work there and at Oxford University. Before coming to Wellesley in 1933 she taught at Walnut Hill School, Natick, Mass., from 1920 to 1930, and in 1932-1933 was head of the English Department at the Northampton School for Girls in Northampton, Mass.

For many years she was a member of the executive committee of the School and College Conference in English and was its vice chairman from 1956 to 1959.

A new idea in smoking!

Salem refreshes your taste

CREATED BY R. J. REYNOLDS TOBACCO CO., WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

- * menthol fresh
- * rich tobacco taste
- * modern filter, too

Perfect Spring days are all too few . . . but you can always enjoy a Salem Cigarette . . . and a Salem refreshes your taste just as Spring refreshes you. Yes, the freshest taste in cigarettes flows through Salem's pure white filter. Rich tobacco taste with a new surprise softness. That's Salem . . . You'll love 'em!

Smoke Salem... Smoke Refreshed
